POLI SCI 320 – GOVERNMENTS AND POLITICS OF THE MIDDLE EAST AND NORTH AFRICA

3-4 credits.

An introduction to the most pertinent themes to the study of politics and governance in the Middle East. Main topics to be covered: political economy of the region; link between Islam, culture and democracy; the politics of authoritarianism; and political Islam.

Requisites: Sophomore standing, POLI SCI 104 or 140

Course Designation: Breadth – Social Science

Level – Intermediate

L&S Credit – Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&S

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Fall 2024

Learning Outcomes: 1. Develop a concrete understanding of the history and politics of the Middle East and North Africa (MENA).

Audience: Undergraduate

2. Apply comparative politics' theories and frameworks toward understanding the current events and the complexities of MENA's politics and governance structures

Audience: Undergraduate

3. Apply critical and analytical skills to different, even contradictory, points of views and contemporary debates relating to MENA politics and ongoing conflicts.

Audience: Undergraduate

4. Demonstrate the ability to write in several forms and present written ideas and arguments for audiences with diverse interests and backgrounds.

Audience: Undergraduate

POLI SCI 323 – ISLAM AND WORLD POLITICS

3-4 credits.

Examines the multifaceted nature of political Islam in the contemporary world. Starting with the basic tenants of Islam, and key concepts and theoretical understandings of the relationships between Islam and politics, the course builds on the approaches developed in the first part of the course examining how Islam has influenced politics differently in various parts of the world including the Middle East, Southeast Asia, and South Asia. Students will familiarize themselves with theoretical debates about the roles of Islam in politics; analyze the impact of Islam on politics in the contemporary world; and gain empirical knowledge about how Islam functions differently in various countries.

Requisites: Sophomore standing

Course Designation: Breadth – Social Science

Level – Intermediate

L&S Credit – Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&S

Grad 50% – Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Spring 2020

Learning Outcomes: 1. Understand theoretical debates about the roles of Islam in politics.

Audience: Undergraduate

2. Analyze the impact of Islam on politics in the contemporary world.

Audience: Undergraduate

3. Gain empirical knowledge about how Islam functions differently in various countries.

Audience: Undergraduate

4. Assess the state of a body of scholarly literature related to course themes, identify gaps in that literature, and formulate an original research question in the context of those gaps.

Audience: Graduate

POLI SCI 324 – CHINESE POLITICS

3-4 credits.

Examine three questions about Chinese politics through a comparative perspective. First, what functions do formal institutions such as the political party, legislature, courts, and bureaucracy serve in an authoritarian regime? Second, what are the political forces that lay a good foundation for China to successfully transition from a planning economy to a robust market economy and sustain high-speed growth for more than four decades? Finally, how does the Chinese government deal with pressing social problems and threats to its authoritarian leadership in this new era?

POLI SCI/INTL ST 325 – SOCIAL MOVEMENTS AND REVOLUTIONS IN LATIN AMERICA

3-4 credits.

An introduction to the major empirical and theoretical themes in the study of social movements and politics in Latin America. While it is impossible to cover every theoretical approach or Latin American case during the semester, the course should give students the tools to begin to think critically about where and why people engage in collective action. We will develop and hone these tools through thinking about Latin American cases, paying specific attention to revolutions, social movements, and riots. The course is designed in three parts. It begins by exposing students to the dominant theoretical paradigms in the study of contentious politics as well as some prominent critiques. The course then turns to empirical themes in Latin American revolutions, challenging students to use and question the theoretical tools to which they have already been exposed. The final part of the course looks to social movements in Latin America. Cases will focus on challenges to dictatorships, identity-based movements, and resistance to globalization.

Requisites: Sophomore standing and (POLI SCI 120, 140 or INTL ST 101) or (POLI SCI 103 or 106 taken prior to Fall 2017)Course Designation: Breadth - Social Science

Level - Intermediate

Repeatable for Credit: NoPOLI SCI 328 – POLITICS OF EAST AND SOUTHEAST ASIA

3-4 credits.

Asia is a vibrant region politically and economically, and is very important to the United States for international security and economic stability. Given its importance, this course provides broad and essential knowledge about Asian nations with a particular focus on China, South Korea, North Korea, Indonesia, Thailand, and the Philippines. Country studies are intended to introduce major issues in comparative politics such as democratization, elections, economic development, security, religion and politics. This course will enable students to (1) gain an empirical and analytical understanding of the political dynamics of the region; (2) think comparatively within the regime and across the developing world more generally; and (3) address and debate theoretical questions in political science through Asian politics materials.

POLI SCI 330 – POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DEVELOPMENT

3-4 credits.

An introduction to the political economy of development. Why are some countries more economically developed than others? To help answer this question, examine leading theories of economic development. In light of these theories, then examine the development experiences of three major regions of the world. Consider a series of issues about development, including the effect of ethnic diversity, corruption, natural resources, and women's empowerment on economic development. Conclude with an examination of the effects of international interactions—via trade, foreign aid, migration, and war—on economic development.

Requisites: Sophomore standing

Course Designation: Breadth – Social Science

Level – Intermediate

L&S Credit – Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&S

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Summer 2024

Learning Outcomes: 1. Address the question of why some countries are rich and others poor.

Audience: Undergraduate

2. Examine leading theories of economic development.

Audience: Undergraduate

3. Discuss the development experiences of three of the world's major regions.

Audience: Undergraduate

4. Consider selected issues—including ethnic diversity, corruption, natural resources, and women's empowerment—in economic development.

Audience: Undergraduate

5. Understand the effects of interactions between nations—via trade, foreign aid, migration and war—on economic development.

POLI SCI 335 – SOCIAL IDENTITIES

3 credits.

An introduction to theories and empirical work on social identities, focusing in particular on definitions and measurement. It has three main goals: First, examine various definitions of social identities and different types of identities (ethnicity, race, nationality, gender, class, and religion). Second, look at techniques and strategies that have been developed to measure identities (content and discourse analysis, surveys, interviews and ethnography, censuses). Third, examine empirical works on identities from a variety of geographical areas and methodological perspectives.

Requisites: Sophomore standingCourse Designation: Breadth – Social Science

Level – Intermediate

L&amp;S Credit – Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&amp;S

Repeatable for Credit: NoLast Taught: Spring 2020Learning Outcomes: 1. Demonstrate their understanding of major theories of social identity, types of social identities, and ways of measuring social identities.

Audience: Undergraduate

2. Utilize the techniques of content analysis, interviews, and surveys to measure social identities.

Audience: Undergraduate

3. Apply knowledge of social identities to a research question, including outlining a research plan and conducting original data collection.

Audience: Undergraduate

4. Evaluate evidence to answer their research question, and contextualize results with respect to existing published work.

Audience: Undergraduate

5. Write up a research paper and communicate the results in an oral presentation with slides.

POLI SCI 336 – DEMOCRACY (AND ITS UNCERTAIN FUTURE)

4 credits.

Democracy has come under stress, both at home and across the world. The global decline of democracy has accelerated over the past decade, and levels of democracy enjoyed by the average global citizen today are down to levels last found around 1990. The promise of democracy's inevitable ascent and dominance after the end of the Cold War has proven shortlived. Examines the state and future of a political system we tend to take for granted but should not. Starts with a brief overview of the evolution of the concept of democracy over time. Examines the relationship between democracy and economic development, culture, identity, and religion. Considers and compares core democratic institutions. Investigates current challenges to democracy and democratization and offers an overview of the state of democracy across different world regions.

Requisites: Sophomore standingCourse Designation: Breadth - Social Science

POLI SCI 338 – THE CIVIL-MILITARY PARADOX IN U.S. POLITICS AND SOCIETY

3 credits.

Protecting a democratic nation from foreign threats often requires that nation to create a powerful military. Yet the creation of a powerful military may undermine the democracy that it is designed to protect. How do, and how should, democracies manage the paradoxical relationship between civilian authority and military institutions. Explores civilian and military perspectives in U.S. civil-military relations; address issues such as the use of military advice by civilian leaders, military challenges to civil authority, and tensions generated by shared responsibility for national security between the executive, legislative, and judicial branches. Studies how civil-military relations impact wider American society by examining the garrison state hypothesis; debates centered upon the draft versus an all-volunteer force; issues of equity and inclusion; and current concerns regarding a civil-military "gap."

Requisites: Sophomore standingCourse Designation: Breadth - Either Humanities or Social Science

Level - Intermediate

L&amp;S Credit - Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&amp;S

Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: NoLast Taught: Fall 2024Learning Outcomes: 1. Demonstrate a critical understanding of the Civil Military Paradox and the complex web of relationships that link the American public, civil authority, and the U.S. armed forces. Articulate an appreciation for why the paradox and civil-military relationships are important.

Audience: Both Grad &amp; Undergrad

2. Demonstrate how civil-military relations (CMR) impact our personal, professional, and civic lives.

Audience: Both Grad &amp; Undergrad

3. Comprehend and apply the vocabulary and theoretical concepts that inform our understanding of civil-military relations.

Audience: Both Grad &amp; Undergrad

4. Explain how big ideas, historical experiences, and wider trends shape civil-military relations in the United States. These considerations include: (a.)the U.S. Constitution(b.)national culture (core assumptions, values, and beliefs)(c.) public sentiment(d.)partisan political debates (e.)the domestic and international environments (political, security, economic, social)(f.)issues of equity/inclusion

Audience: Both Grad &amp; Undergrad

5. Address critical issues and debates related to civil-military relations in U.S. politics and society—past, present, and future.

Audience: Both Grad &amp; Undergrad

6. Demonstrate how to think critically and write effectively. Respond to contemporary civil-military issues by developing recommendations for action. Support these recommendations with properly interpreted evidence and sound argument.

Audience: Undergraduate

7. Produce research and analysis that deepens our understanding of the issues, theory, and/or practice of civil-military relations

Audience: Graduate

POLI SCI 339 – NON-DEMOCRACIES

3 credits.

Studies the varieties and characteristics of non-democratic regimes from around the world: how they form, why they endure, and when they collapse, engaging along the way with theories of electoral behavior, political psychology, political violence, popular mobilization, and democratization.

Requisites: POLI SCI 120 or 182

Course Designation: Breadth – Social Science

Level – Intermediate

L&S Credit – Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&S

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Spring 2024

Learning Outcomes: 1. Identify key types of non-democratic regimes and their characteristics.

Audience: Undergraduate

2. Identify why these regimes resist pressures to democratize.

Audience: Undergraduate

3. Identify the key legacies of non-democratic regimes.

Audience: Undergraduate

POLI SCI 340 – THE EUROPEAN UNION: POLITICS AND POLITICAL ECONOMY

3-4 credits.

Introduction to the politics, political economy, history, and theory of European integration. Topics include the workings of EU institutions and law, the effect of the EU on national politics and economies, economic politics and policy-making in the EU, the EU as an actor in the world economy.

Requisites: Sophomore standing

Course Designation: Breadth – Social Science

Level – Intermediate

L&S Credit – Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&S

Grad 50% – Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

POLI SCI 342 – STATE-BUILDING: HOW STATES ARE FORMED, FUNCTION, AND INFLUENCE SOCIETY

3-4 credits.

Exploration of state-building: examining how states are formed, how they develop and maintain political power, and the ways in which they shape society. Draw on insights from political science, but also economics, history, and anthropology, to learn about the processes of state formation, the importance of state capacity, and the state's role in war, governance, and social justice. Topics will include the relationship between the state and issues like the environment, gender, and identity, highlighting both the challenges and opportunities states face in a rapidly changing world. Analysis of historical and contemporary examples from various political systems yields insights into the state's role as both a force for order and a driver of social change. Lectures, discussions, and case studies, will lead to a deeper understanding of the state's central role in global politics and everyday life.

Requisites: Sophomore standingCourse Designation: Breadth - Social Science

Level - Intermediate

L&amp;S Credit - Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&amp;S

Repeatable for Credit: NoLearning Outcomes: 1. Identify and describe key theories and historical processes involved in state formation, including the roles of conflict, economy, and ideology.

Audience: Undergraduate

2. Examine how states develop and maintain capacity, manage resources, and exert authority, including the factors that contribute to strong versus weak states.

Audience: Undergraduate

3. Use comparative analysis to understand differences in state-building processes across historical and cultural contexts, developing a critical perspective on the state's evolving role globally.

Audience: Undergraduate

POLI SCI 343 – THEORIES OF INTERNATIONAL SECURITY

3-4 credits.

Role of alliances in contemporary and historical international political systems. Purpose of alliance formation; reasons for their dissolution; relationship of alliance activity with international war and with political integration. Role of alliances in future international systems. Not open to students with credit for POLI SCI 367 prior to fall 2017

Requisites: Sophomore standing and (POLI SCI 140 or INTL ST 101) or (POLI SCI 103 taken prior to Fall 2017)Course Designation: Breadth - Social Science

Audience: Undergraduate

2. Explain the purpose of alliance formation and reasons for their dissolution.

Audience: Undergraduate

3. Critically evaluate the role of alliances in future international systems.

Audience: Undergraduate

POLI SCI 344 – THE RUSSIAN WAR ON UKRAINE: CAUSES AND CONSEQUENCES

3 credits.

Examines causes and consequences of the Russian invasion and war on Ukraine. Analyzes the war using concepts in comparative politics (e.g., regime type, national identity, and domestic politics in Ukraine and Russia) and international relations (e.g., international security, institutions and norms, sanctions and trade, migration and human rights).

Requisites: Sophomore standingCourse Designation: Breadth - Social Science

Level - Intermediate

L&amp;S Credit - Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&amp;S

Repeatable for Credit: NoLast Taught: Spring 2025Learning Outcomes: 1. Analyze and explain political science work relevant to Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

Audience: Undergraduate

2. Critically assess how prior political science work does or does not help explain outcomes related to the Russian war in Ukraine.

Audience: Undergraduate

3. Engage and participate in discussion with peers, instructors, and the public on the topic of Russia's invasion of Ukraine

Audience: Undergraduate

4. Write an original research paper that analyzes political science theory in light of empirical data on the Russian war in Ukraine, and present the findings of the paper to the class.

Audience: Undergraduate

POLI SCI 345 – CONFLICT RESOLUTION

3-4 credits.

Every war comes to an end, but some end sooner than others. This course analyzes why and how conflicts come to an end, discussion relevant theories of conflict and conflict resolution, and important cases. Not open to students with credit for POLI SCI 378 prior to fall 2017

Requisites: Sophomore standing and (POLI SCI 140 or INTL ST 101) or (POLI SCI 103 taken prior to fall 2017) or graduate standing

POLI SCI 348 – ANALYSIS OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

3-4 credits.

Focuses on how to analyze problems in international politics by the use of game theory. Examples include governments making choices about the size of their military forces, barriers to trade, or international agreements on environmental issues. Analysts study strategic interaction using both informal and mathematical methods. Provides a good introduction to the basics of game theory -- a tool useful in many different settings -- as well as an introduction to the study of world politics. From the perspective of quantitative reasoning, one of the most important set of lessons center on the logic of strategic interaction and the notion of equilibrium. Along with basic game theory students will also be introduced to the pragmatic use of mathematical tools including algebra, set theory, functions, and probability theory. Not open to students with credit for POLI SCI 376 prior to fall 2017

Requisites: Satisfied Quantitative Reasoning (QR) A requirement and (POLI SCI 140 or INTL ST 101) or (POLI SCI 103 taken prior to Fall 2017)

Course Designation: Gen Ed - Quantitative Reasoning Part B

Breadth - Social Science

Level - Intermediate

L&S Credit - Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&S

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Spring 2025

Learning Outcomes: 1. Understand the logic of strategic interaction.

Audience: Undergraduate

2. Master the basics of non-cooperative game theory.

Audience: Undergraduate

3. Be able to apply the logic of strategic interaction to international politics.

Audience: Undergraduate

4. Master the algebra necessary to solve games with complete and incomplete information.

Audience: Undergraduate

5. Master the algebra necessary to solve both one-time and iterated games.

Audience: Undergraduate

6. Understand the logic of signaling games.

Audience: Undergraduate

POLI SCI 349 – GLOBAL ACCESS TO JUSTICE

3 credits.

Lawyers are present in all countries, but their roles vary tremendously. In some countries, lawyers are greatly respected and are seen as making an important contribution by representing their clients and participating in the political process. In other countries, lawyers are viewed as less essential, perhaps even as a nuisance. Study lawyers in many different countries in an effort to explain the variation in their status and the consequent impact on citizens' access to justice.

Requisites: POLI SCI 120, 140, or sophomore standing

Course Designation: Breadth - Social Science

Level - Intermediate

L&S Credit - Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&S

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Fall 2024

Learning Outcomes: 1. Understand and compare the role of lawyers in the U.S. and other countries.

Audience: Undergraduate

2. Contrast the role of lawyers in democratic and authoritarian political systems.

Audience: Undergraduate

3. Synthesize social science readings and formulate arguments in written and oral form.

Audience: Undergraduate

4. Improve oral advocacy skills through active classroom discussion.

Audience: Undergraduate

POLI SCI 350 – INTERNATIONAL POLITICAL ECONOMY

3-4 credits.

Analyzes the interaction of politics and economics in the international arena, both historically and in the contemporary era of globalization. Focuses on international trade, monetary, and financial relations in both developed and developing economies. Not open to students with credit for POLI SCI 371 prior to fall 2017

Requisites: Sophomore standing and (POLI SCI 140 or INTL ST 101) or (POLI SCI 103 taken prior to fall 2017) or graduate standing

Course Designation: Breadth - Social Science

Level - Intermediate

L&S Credit - Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&S

Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Spring 2024

Learning Outcomes: 1. Apply basic knowledge of historical events in international political economy.

Audience: Undergraduate

2. Understand how international economic flows affect and constrain domestic policymakers.

Audience: Undergraduate

3. Discuss international trade, monetary, and financial relations in both developed and developing economies.

Audience: Undergraduate

4. Assess the state of a body of scholarly literature related to course themes, identify gaps in that literature, and formulate an original research question in the context of those gaps.

Audience: Graduate

POLI SCI/LEGAL ST 352 – TRANSITIONAL JUSTICE IN WORLD POLITICS

3-4 credits.

Provides an introduction to the study of transitional justice (TJ), or how institutions – local, domestic, and international – address the legacies of human rights abuses. Explore several key questions motivating the study of transitional justice: Why do societies pursue accountability for past repression in general? How do transitioning societies go about these pursuits? What effects might TJ policies have on prospects for democracy, rule of law, and future human rights abuses? Special attention to how local and global politics interact to influence both the development and the effects of different transitional justice policies.

Requisites: Sophomore standing

Course Designation: Breadth – Social Science

Level – Intermediate

L&S Credit – Counts as Liberal Arts and Science credit in L&S

Repeatable for Credit: No

Learning Outcomes: 1. Describe the history and political foundations of transitional justice

POLI SCI/CHICLA/HISTORY/LACIS 355 – LABOR IN THE AMERICAS: US & MEXICO IN COMPARATIVE & HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE

3 credits.

Provides a critical examination of the history of labor and working people in the Americas, from the colonial era to the present. It focuses on the experience of the United States and Mexico, offering a comparative perspective on their distinct but also shared (and increasingly linked) histories. The seminar proceeds chronologically, highlighting major episodes in the evolution of labor systems in the two countries, beginning with the colonial labor systems implemented by the Spanish and British empires following the European conquest of the Western Hemisphere. Among other topics, we will examine the pivotal role of slavery and other forms of forced labor, the impact of the industrial revolution, the emergence and expansion of corporate capitalism and the labor unrest it provoked in the post-civil war U.S., the role of labor in the Mexican Revolution and its aftermath, the impact of the Great Depression and labor incorporation on the post-WWII social and political order of both countries, the breakdown of that order and the move to neo-liberalism in the 1970s and 1980s, and the emergence of an increasingly integrated North American production system and its consequences for labor and working people on both sides of the US-Mexico border.

POLI SCI/RELIG ST 433 – RELIGION AND POLITICS

3-4 credits.

Explores the relationships and interactions between religion and politics from a comparative perspective. Discuss the appropriate relationship between religion and state. Investigate the implications of the various ways in which the religion-state relationship have been involved in political conflict. Building on this, turn to several of the current issues in religion and politics asking: Why is religion apparently more important than ever despite an increasingly secular world? What is religious nationalism? What is fundamentalism? How can we explain the similarities and differences between religious fundamentalist movements across the globe? How should democratic states cope with the emergence of fundamentalist movements? In order to begin answering these questions, integrate the theoretical frameworks we develop with explorations of the historical and local context of relevant case-studies from around the world.

POLI SCI 437 – NATIONALISM AND ETHNIC CONFLICT

3-4 credits.

Nationalist conflict and ethnic contestation remain major components of global politics. Drawing on cases from around the world, this course explores why this is the case. In the process, we will address a number of crucial questions: What are nations and ethnic groups? Where do they come from? Why do they pick particular territories? How do they define who can be part of the group? Why are they so successful in mobilizing people to kill and be killed? In the course of answering these questions, the course investigates the interactions between nations and states, religion and nationalism, globalization, citizenship and minority rights, and the causes and solutions for national and ethnic conflict.

POLI SCI 602 – WISCONSIN IN WASHINGTON ADVANCED PUBLIC POLICY COURSE

4 credits.

The public policy process is structured argument and decision making within institutional contexts. This class introduces students to analytic frameworks for thinking about various aspects of this process. We do not study a single context or policy, but, rather, seek to understand how policies might succeed (or fail) in one context or another. The principal framework is institutional analysis, or the way in which formal and informal rules shape policies and their outcomes. Students will learn to perform institutional analysis as well as write a memorandum presenting such an analysis to a policymaker. Students will align their final projects to their personal and professional activities and/or their internship. The course will help students understand how policies can achieve durable impact, and how progress made through policies can be defended amid institutional pitfalls.

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: Yes, unlimited number of completions

Last Taught: Spring 2021

POLI SCI 800 – POLITICAL SCIENCE AS A DISCIPLINE AND PROFESSION

1 credit.

Describes and evaluates major approaches used in political science. Explores issues related to professional development and political science careers.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Fall 2024

Learning Outcomes: 1. Demonstrate an understanding of political science as a discipline and profession.

Audience: Graduate

2. Recognize major approaches used in the discipline of political science and the "hidden curriculum" of the profession.

Audience: Graduate

3. Identify a broad cross-section of the faculty and their research in the political science department.

Audience: Graduate

POLI SCI 801 – DISSERTATION PROPOSAL RESEARCH AND WRITING SEMINAR

3 credits.

Provides structured support and mentorship for political science dissertation proposal writing. Includes topics such as defining relevant research questions, incorporating existing scholarship, developing a theory and research design and drafting a full prospectus.

Requisites: Declared in Political Science doctoral program

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: Yes, unlimited number of completions

Last Taught: Fall 2024

Learning Outcomes: 1. Fully form their dissertation committee.
Audience: Graduate

2. Produce a draft of their dissertation prospectus.

Audience: Graduate

POLI SCI/FRENCH/GERMAN/HISTORY/SOC 804 – INTERDISCIPLINARY WESTERN EUROPEAN AREA STUDIES SEMINAR

3 credits.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Spring 2025

POLI SCI 811 – INTRODUCTION TO STATISTICAL COMPUTING IN POLITICAL SCIENCE

1-3 credits.

Introduction to the issues of statistical computing in political science using statistical packages such as STATA and R with emphasis on developing sound practices for organizing data, protocols, and results in empirical research. Not open to students with credit for POLI SCI 553 prior to fall 2017

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: Yes, unlimited number of completions

Last Taught: Fall 2023

POLI SCI 812 – INTRODUCTION TO STATISTICAL METHODS IN POLITICAL SCIENCE

4 credits.

Introductory statistics course for Ph.D. students. Emphasis on probability theory, inference, and the foundations of multivariate least squares and maximum likelihood.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Fall 2024

Learning Outcomes: 1. Critically read, interpret and replicate the quantitative content of many articles in the quantitative social sciences
Audience: Graduate

2. Conduct, interpret, and communicate results from analysis using multiple regression

Audience: Graduate

3. Explain the limitations of observational data for making causal claims, and begin to use existing strategies for attempting to make causal claims from observational data

Audience: Graduate

4. Write clean, reusable, and reliable R code

Audience: Graduate

5. Feel empowered working with data

Audience: Graduate

POLI SCI 813 – MULTIVARIABLE STATISTICAL INFERENCE FOR POLITICAL RESEARCH

3 credits.

Extensive treatment of multiple regression and its variants.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Spring 2025

POLI SCI 814 – SOCIAL IDENTITIES: DEFINITION AND MEASUREMENT

3 credits.

Analyzes the concept of social identities with a focus on definition, comparison, and measurement. Explores a range of theories as well as methodological techniques for measurement. Examines classic works on race, ethnic, national, class, gender, and religious identities.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Spring 2020

POLI SCI 817 – EMPIRICAL METHODS OF POLITICAL INQUIRY

3 credits.

Acquaints students with a wide variety of research methods used to analyze political phenomena, emphasizing both quantitative and qualitative approaches.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Fall 2024

POLI SCI 818 – MAXIMUM LIKELIHOOD ESTIMATION

3 credits.

Develops the theory of maximum likelihood estimation and applies it to models for discrete and limited dependent variables common to political and social science data.

Requisites: POLI SCI 812 and 813

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Fall 2024

POLI SCI 820 – EXPERIMENTAL METHODS

3 credits.

Experimental methods in the social sciences, with specific application to political science. Covers the logic of experimentation and how experiments can be used to investigate social phenomena. Interpret, design, execute and analyze experiments.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: Yes, for 3 number of completions

Learning Outcomes: 1. Explain important concepts and arguments made by prominent scholars in causal inference and experimental methods
Audience: Graduate

2. Design, analyze and field experiments suited to your own particular research question
Audience: Graduate

3. Understand and explain the ethical debates that surround experimental research
Audience: Graduate

4. Assess varied types of experimental designs on several dimensions
Audience: Graduate

5. Apply course concepts to analysis of current research and contemporary social scientific debates
Audience: Graduate

POLI SCI 821 – MASS POLITICAL BEHAVIOR

3 credits.

An empirical analysis of the role of mass publics in political life and the factors which determine the formation and expression of political beliefs and attitudes.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

3 credits.

In depth study of key works of Roman political thought, along with recent and classic scholarship in political theory, history, philosophy, classics, and literature.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Fall 2020

Learning Outcomes: 1. Master the state of existing research on Roman political thought through the study of primary and secondary sources.

Audience: Graduate

2. Develop expertise in methods of political inquiry, specifically the study of the history of political thought.

Audience: Graduate

3. Design, conduct, and complete original research dealing with Roman political thought.

Audience: Graduate

4. Communicate effectively, in both speech and writing, complex concepts and arguments related to Roman political thought to multiple audiences.

Audience: Graduate

POLI SCI/A A E 835 – GAME THEORY AND POLITICAL ANALYSIS

3 credits.

An introduction to the tools of game theoretic analysis, with reference to the use of game theory in political science. Intended for those desiring a basic familiarity with the theory, and for those planning further work in formal modeling.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Spring 2025

POLI SCI 836 – FORMAL MODELS OF DOMESTIC POLITICS

3 credits.

Provides an overview of formal, i.e., game-theoretic, models of domestic politics. This course builds directly upon the material presented in Political Science 835.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Fall 2022

POLI SCI 837 – FORMAL MODELS OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

3 credits.

Provides an overview of the formal theory literature in international relations, including international security and international political economy.

Requisites: POLI SCI/A A E 835

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Spring 2021

POLI SCI 839 – FIELD SEMINAR IN POLITICAL THEORY

3 credits.

An overview of approaches to interpreting, teaching, and writing about political theory.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Fall 2024

Learning Outcomes: 1. Analyze different understandings of political theory as a subfield of political science

Audience: Graduate

2. Analyze different methods and schools of studying political theory

Audience: Graduate

3. Analyze different approaches to teaching works of political thought

Audience: Graduate

POLI SCI 840 – COMPARATIVE POLITICAL ECONOMY

3 credits.

Survey of field of comparative political economy and in-depth study of political economy of democratic and non-democratic capitalist systems. Key themes include: business and labor relations, globalization and its impact on domestic political economies, rise of emergent powers.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

POLI SCI 843 – THE POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DEVELOPMENT

3 credits.

We examine why some countries are rich, and others are poor. Selected topics include the role of institutions, regime type, corruption, the resource curse, ethnic differences and state capacity. We focus on the cutting edge of the empirical literature on development, and pay close attention to measurement and causal inference.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Spring 2025

Learning Outcomes: 1. Develop theoretically grounded and testable hypotheses about the political economy of development.

Audience: Graduate

2. Formulate and implement clear research designs to evaluate hypotheses.

Audience: Graduate

POLI SCI 844 – DEMOCRATIC IMPERFECTIONS

3 credits.

Democracies frequently depart from their ideal type. We focus on select problems with democracy, and examine their causes and effects, and remedies for them. Topics vary from year-to-year, and include inequalities in political representation and participation, a lack of accountability and ethnic voting.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Learning Outcomes: 1. Develop theoretically grounded and testable hypotheses about the causes and effects of, and remedies for, inequalities in political representation and participation.

Audience: Graduate

2. Formulate and implement clear research designs to evaluate hypotheses.

Audience: Graduate

POLI SCI 846 – RACIAL AND ETHNIC DIVERSITY: CAUSES AND EFFECTS

3 credits.

Focuses on the causes and effects of racial and ethnic diversity in a range of contexts across different countries. Includes the following topics: 1) definitions of diversity and how ethnic and racial diversity is measured; 2) the causes of diversity including migrations and state actions such as ethnic cleansing and colonialism, and later processes of immigration and segregation; 3) the effects of diversity or segregation, including on social relations, conflict, public good provision, and political behavior; and the effects of ethnic and racial diversity in organizations; and 4) considers ways of increasing diversity including affirmative action and quotas, and the effectiveness of diversity training. Readings will include cases studies from different countries and different time periods and will include a range of different racial and ethnic groups around the world.

Requisites: Graduate/professional standing

Course Designation: Grad 50% - Counts toward 50% graduate coursework requirement

Repeatable for Credit: No

Last Taught: Spring 2024

Learning Outcomes: 1. Gain an understanding of the meaning and measurement of racial and ethnic diversity.

Audience: Graduate

2. Become familiar with the social science literature on the causes and effects of ethnic and racial diversity and segregation.

Audience: Graduate

3. Identify and learn about research methods used in the study of racial and ethnic diversity.

Audience: Graduate

4. Develop critical reading, writing, collaboration, and presentation skills.

Audience: Graduate
