3 credits.

This course aims to enhance students' ability to navigate uncertainty. The course provides an overview about what we know about the challenges people face in situations with risk and uncertainty. We will use that knowledge to help students identify decision-making biases and to build a framework students can use for thinking clearly about decisions in uncertain environments. We will introduce techniques for improving our understanding of risk and uncertainty and the potential consequences of our choices. Finally, throughout the course we will practice working through making inferences and decisions in the face of ambiguity.
