

LAW, DOCTORAL MINOR

A combination of Law School courses totaling 10 credits may be used to earn the doctoral minor in Law. While there are no required courses, it may be in the student's best interest to consider a combination of courses around a common theme. Prospective students may find the curricular resources available at this Law School website (<https://law.wisc.edu/academics/curriculum/#specialized>) particularly helpful - specifically the "Areas of Study Curriculum Guides" and "Curricular Concentrations."

Students may also find the full list of LAW (<https://guide.wisc.edu/courses/law/>) courses useful in their planning, though do note that most courses are offered on a rotating basis. Please consult the campus enrollment tool for current semester offerings or contact the Law School Registrar with any questions.
