CLASSICS 150 — ANCIENT GREEK AND ROMAN MONSTERS
3 credits.
Ancient monsters were forces of chaos that threatened the natural order of the universe: they had to be contained, banished to the edges of the world or destroyed. But the Greeks and Romans also believed them to be magical beings that held the promise of special knowledge - of the past, of dangers to be faced, of musical arts - or which, like the Sphinx, posessed an enigmatic intelligence capable of fooling all but the most cunning of mortals. In this course we investigate these contrasting aspects of ancient monsters, drawing directly on texts (in translation) and works of art through which the Greeks and Romans explored the monstrous and its place in their world. We also compare ancient representations with those in modern artistic media - comics, games, stories and movies - considering both how our notions of the monstrous are influenced by or contrast with those of our ancient predecessors, and how our very identities are created by and enacted through our depictions of monsters. Enroll Info: None

CLASSICS 340 — CONSPIRACY IN THE ANCIENT AND MODERN WORLDS
3 credits.
Focusing primarily on the world of the ancient Romans, (in translation) interrogates the phenomenon and notion of "conspiracy" within the political, social, and religious spheres. After investigating some of the more famous political conspiracies (e.g. the Catilinarian Conspiracy, assassination of Julius Caesar, etc.), turn to the structure of the traditional Roman household, including the preeminence of the paterfamilias and the challenges that women, children, and/or slaves pose to his notional "tyranny." Finally, consider a number of prominent religions that came into conflict with Roman authorities - especially the mystery cults surrounding Bacchus as well as early Christianity. Bring to bear the insights gleaned from the ancient world on the modern one in consideration of such modern conspiracies as the Salem Witch Trials, the Kennedy Assassination, and the Watergate Conspiracy.
