JOURN 175 — MEDIA FLUENCY FOR THE DIGITAL AGE
3 credits.

The digital media landscape is rapidly evolving, and it has major ramifications on how we view and interact with political, social, and economic landscapes. Throughout, students will become more fluent in digital media by examining current and emerging media and the issues and opportunities surrounding it, while producing and consuming digital media content. Being "digitally fluent" is considered a key 21st Century skill. So what does it mean to be fluent in digital media? It goes way beyond putting a "snap" on your Story or posting to Facebook. It's a matter of knowing which medium is best given what you want to say - and who you want to converse with! Critically examine and engage with this media landscape. Analyze how digital media content is created and digested by various audiences across social, political, and economic environments. Enroll Info: None
