Clinical Psychological Science Pathway¹

Students pursuing the limited enrollment accredited Clinical Psychological Science pathway in the program complete the requirements for the doctoral program with specified coursework comprising Foundations in Clinical Psychological Science within the first two years of matriculation, as well as Advanced Clinical Psychological Science. Coursework includes the etiology and treatment of psychopathology, the theory and application of clinical assessment, clinical research methods, statistics/methodology courses, as well as other coursework in nonclinical areas both in and outside of the department. Working from this foundation, students may complete an approved internship or engage in further research.

The coursework in Clinical Psychological Science typically requires three years to complete. After completing the Foundations coursework, students determine a training path in consultation with the program faculty. Depending on the student's research goals and/or clinical training aspirations, it may take six or more years to complete all training opportunities in the program (i.e., clinical practicum, masters and dissertation research, internship).

¹ These pathways are internal to the program and represent different curricular paths a student can follow to earn this degree. Pathway names do not appear in the Graduate School admissions application, and they will not appear on the transcript.
