The history major can also be combined with any other major in the college of Letters & Science (L&S), anything from astronomy to zoology. Majors that students most frequently pair with history are: economics, English, environmental studies, journalism, and political science. History majors can also choose to add certificates in L&S or from outside the college, such as the certificates in business or education and educational services. In addition to these, some of the most common certificates for history majors are currently: criminal justice, global health, agricultural-life-sciences/nutritional-sciences/global-health-certificate, European studies, and digital studies. The history advising team is happy to discuss ways for you to make your intellectual and career goals work as part of a four-year plan.
