WHY STUDY HISTORY AT UW–MADISON?

History is so much more than memorizing names and dates. Are you interested in technology? Religion? The environment? Human rights? If you have a question, history can help you find an answer.

The history major at UW–Madison is a great option for people who are interested in studying the past and understanding its impact on the present. History majors develop skills in critical thinking, research, analysis, and communication that are highly valued in a wide range of careers. Many history majors go on to graduate or professional study in fields such as law, business, medicine, public policy, and more.

History majors who are unsure of their career paths can get great advice from our engaged alumni, who serve as career mentors, and by taking HISTORY 300. The history advising team is happy to discuss ways for you to make your intellectual and career goals work as part of a four-year plan.
